USSR: Tentative North-South Summit Plans

The Soviets reportedly are considering sending a high-level delegation to the North-South summit in October in Mexico City because President Reagan may attend. Moscow has indicated, however, that it will not accept summit guidelines that use a "capitalist definition" for foreign aid. In recent years the USSR has rebuffed increasing pressures from Third World countries for economic assistance on the grounds that their problems result from "the capitalist-colonialist legacy."
